

From Brokenness to Belonging

A weekend retreat with John Magnuson & Kristine Pappone

We all come into recovery carrying cracks — the marks of loss, trauma, shame, and the choices that once broke us open. Yet what if those cracks were not signs of weakness, but invitations to healing? Inspired by the ancient Japanese art of Kintsugi, this retreat explores how our brokenness can become the very place where grace and growth enter. Like pottery repaired with gold, our wounds can be transformed into strength and beauty when we allow the light of honesty, humility, and connection to shine through.

This weekend will offer an opportunity to reflect on the cracks that shaped us and the gold that now fills them. Each participant will create their own art piece, turning something broken into something beautiful. Using story, play, 12-step spiritual practice, and community, we'll explore how to embrace imperfection as part of the recovery process — discovering that our brokenness doesn't keep us from recovery; it's what makes recovery possible.

$350/person

includes lodging, food & materials.
Scholarship funds are available.

John Magnuson has been active in recovery for over 27 years and is the founder of Relevant Recovery, an organization dedicated to helping individuals, families, and leaders experience healing, purpose, and connection. Drawing from his own recovery journey and decades of work in leadership, coaching, and advocacy, John has developed programs that blend spiritual growth, education, and community engagement. He is passionate about guiding others toward transformation, using his experience and insight to support families and leaders in navigating the challenges of recovery.

Kristine Pappone is a speaker, coach, and Licensed Alcohol and Drug Counselor, dedicated to holistic healing and recovery. After overcoming cancer and opioid addiction through Buddhist practice, nutrition, and yoga, she has spent over 30 years helping others discover health, happiness, and purpose. She designs and delivers educational programming that nurtures growth, connection, and lasting transformation. For the past six years, Kristine has been facilitating Kintsugi workshops that blend art, reflection, and recovery.
